

Job Ad

Lecturer – Sociology.

The Department of Sociology at Purdue University invites applications for two continuing lecturer positions beginning August 14, 2017. Continuing Lectureships are non-tenure track teaching positions with renewable three year contracts, competitive salaries, medical and retirement benefits.

We seek applicants with the following qualifications:

- PhD in sociology or related field preferred; ABD considered
- Ability to teach large course sections

Desired qualifications include: 1) ability to contribute to the strategic vision of the undergraduate curriculum through such course offerings as sociology of environment, political sociology, sociology of technology, formal organizations and others that align with the university missions 2) ability to supervise and mentor graduate teaching assistants; 3) ability to teach on-line courses; 4) interests in the scholarship of teaching and innovative teaching techniques.

Review of applications will begin immediately and continue until the positions are filled. A background check is required for employment for these positions.

To apply, submit electronically to studebak@purdue.edu in one email with “SOC CL” in the subject as PDF documents: 1) a letter for application addressed to Dr. Bert Useem, Head of the search; 2) curriculum vitae; 3) copies of syllabi of courses taught; 4) summary of student evaluations (quantitative and qualitative comments); 5) a teaching statement/philosophy; and 6) three letters of references.

Purdue University is an EOE/AA employer. All individuals, including minorities, women, individuals with disabilities, and veterans, are encouraged to apply.