

Tulane University, Department of Sociology
Tenure-Track Assistant Professor

The Department of Sociology at Tulane University invites applications for a tenure-track assistant professor position to begin July, 2018. Preferred areas of specialization are race/ethnicity and urban sociology. The successful candidate will be expected to pursue an active research agenda, teach in and contribute to the department's undergraduate and graduate programs, and teach service learning courses. Ability to teach advanced quantitative methods at the graduate level is a plus, as is skill at grant writing. Review of applications will begin September 15, 2017, and continue until the position is filled. All application materials must be submitted online at <http://apply.interfolio.com/42713>; required materials include a letter of interest describing background, qualifications, and research and teaching strengths; a current Curriculum Vita; and samples of representative publications. Applicants should also arrange to have three letters of reference forwarded to <http://apply.interfolio.com/42713> on their behalf. For additional information, applicants can contact Michele Adams, Chair of Sociology (madams2@tulane.edu). Tulane University is an equal employment opportunity/affirmative action/persons with disabilities/veterans employer committed to excellence through diversity. Tulane will not discriminate against individuals with disabilities or veterans. All eligible candidates are encouraged to apply.