

American History Position

Position Overview: The Department of History and Political Science invites applications for the position of Assistant Professor of History, with a specialization in American History. This is a tenure-track, full-time position.

Responsibilities: Teach undergraduate courses in American History (introductory surveys and advanced courses in the candidate's area of expertise). The department seeks a person with a strong commitment to, and demonstrated excellence in, undergraduate teaching. Teaching load is 24 semester hours per year.

Qualifications: Ph.D. required, although ABD applicants (who are very near completion) will be considered. The successful candidate will have a strong commitment to, and demonstrated excellence in, undergraduate teaching.

Salary: Dependent upon qualifications and experience.

General Information: Manchester University offers more than 60 areas of undergraduate study, two master's programs (athletic training and pharmacogenomics) and a professional doctorate in pharmacy to nearly 1,600 students from 25 states and 17 countries. The independent, liberal arts school is located in North Manchester, Ind., where 73 percent of the students live on the 120-acre campus. Our four-year Doctor of Pharmacy program is on a Fort Wayne, Ind., campus. Manchester has deep roots in the Church of the Brethren; about 6 percent of the students are members of the denomination.

The University has a distinctive commitment to encouraging international consciousness in its students. The special January session affords students a variety of options for international and domestic travel and study.

To Apply: We seek a candidate with a commitment to working effectively with students, faculty, and staff from diverse backgrounds. Applications are due by October 15, 2017. Review of applications will begin at that time and will continue until the position is filled.
