

The Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Social Work at the University of North Florida seeks a full time (nine-month), tenure-track faculty member in Sociology at the level of Assistant Professor to begin in August 2019. We seek teacher-scholars working in the areas of Race and Ethnic Minorities. The successful candidate will excel in teaching courses in sociological theory and/or research methods, and electives reflecting their area of expertise. Additional areas of interest could include Family, Social Psychology or Health. In addition to teaching, the successful candidate will be expected to maintain an active research agenda including publication in peer-reviewed outlets and securing external research funding, and to make meaningful service contributions to the Department, University and discipline. All candidates must have an earned Ph.D. in Sociology by August 1, 2019.

The University of North Florida is a growing urban comprehensive university on the Atlantic coast with over 16,000 students. UNF strategically supports an aim to operate as a preeminent, vibrantly inclusive employer in higher education. The successful candidate should demonstrate a capacity to work among diverse constituencies in the immediate university community and beyond. More information about the University and the Department may be found at <http://www.unf.edu/coas/sasw/>.

To apply, please complete an online application at <http://www.unfjobs.org> (position #312390). Applicants must complete the online application and electronically upload a letter of interest, CV, an unofficial transcript. Please included a statement of research focus and direction (under the supplemental document type "Department Specific: See Special Instructions"), as well as, a statement on teaching philosophy and experience. A minimum of three (3) references with contact information is required to be listed in the application (short-listed candidates will be asked to have original, signed letters mailed or submitted via Interfolio). Incomplete applications will not be considered.
