

The Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Middle Tennessee State University invites applications for a tenure-track faculty position (#129240) in Sociology at the assistant/associate professor rank. Start date for this position is August 1, 2020. A terminal degree in Sociology is expected by appointment date.

While areas of specialization are open, of particular interest are candidates with research and teaching interest in data analysis/statistics and/or crime/deviance/addiction studies prepared to teach at both the graduate and undergraduate levels. Candidates with a commitment to social justice and to teaching social justice issues may receive special consideration. The successful candidate will be expected to have an active research agenda, teaching experience and professional activity. The department consists of 11 sociologists and 9 anthropologists which offers undergraduate majors in both fields and an M.A. in Sociology. MTSU is located in Murfreesboro, TN, a fast growing and affordable community approximately 35 miles southeast of Nashville.
